"He wasn't special, he wasn't fancy. But Astro was a little girl's dream come true. When I got off him after riding him for the first time, he simply put his head in my arms and just stood there. That's when I knew this horse picked me.

He was my first horse and was as forgiving as they come. He was the definition of bomb-proof, and the very best trail companion. He allowed me to make all the mistakes that come with first time ownership. And he loved me all the same, learning my whistle and to march over to it from the other end of the paddock.

Unfortunately after only three years together, Astro succumbed to various health issues. His last day was full of pets and snacks (Poptarts being one of his favorites). And when I led him to the grassy section of a field where he'd lay down for the last time, he once again put his head in my arms as a final goodbye."
